

GSK Collection

6th October – 17th November 2007
Gibberd Gallery

Two screenprints by Charlotte Cornish

The Gibberd Gallery hosts an exhibition of artwork on loan from GlaxoSmithKline's Harlow offices. As the primary sponsors of the Gibberd Gallery, this exhibition gives the general public a rare opportunity to view work from GSK Harlow's impressive collection of paintings, prints and textiles.

Featured in this exhibition are four delightful prints by the renowned British artist John Piper depicting architectural aspects of churches and chapels. The GSK collection also contains work by less well-known artists; there is also a degree of risk-taking in the acquisition of works by newer talent, such as Sawako Ando and Carolina Fungairino.

"This is the second time that the GSK Harlow site has provided artworks for an exhibition at the Gibberd Gallery. The collection this time has been chosen by GSK employees and is a far more eclectic mix. It is also a truer reflection of the diversity of art that can be found within the research site" GSK spokesperson.
