We Will Remember Them

Harlow has inherited the memorials that the people of the original town of Harlow and the adjacent villages created after the two World Wars. One hundred and twenty men died during the first conflict and 32 during the second.

These men are either buried or commemorated in many places around the world. They are also commemorated in Harlow on four memorial crosses, various tablets in churches and chapels, by a War Memorial Institute and a Memorial Garden, along with a variety of Memorials to individuals. Those who died in service of their country since 1945 are remembered on the Netteswell Memorial Cross in Harlow Town Park. There are a total of 23 war graves in Harlow.
